"STRIKE in the nails, soldiers, and let our guest see the reality of our good Roman justice!" The speaker wrapped his purple cloak closer about his powerful frame and settled back into his official chair, much as he might have settled back in his seat at the Circus Maximus to enjoy the clash of gladiatorial swords.

We are the worms of the earth, Against the lions of might. All of our days we are tied to the land, While they hunt and they feast and they fight. We give our crops and our homes and our lives, The clerics tell us this is right. And they've beat us before, and they'll beat us again, But we'll drink from their helmets tonight. Our Lord went away to the war, mounted on top a tall stallion, To ...
